Madison County S&L expects sale by June

By Ed Gurney
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Madison County Federal Savings and Loan will probably be sold in the next three months, according to a spokesman for the federal agency overseeing operation of the troubled financial institution.

Although it is likely Madison County Federal will be sold, it is also possible deposits will be transferred to another savings and loan or that the firm will be liquidated, said Stanley Gish of the Resolution Trust Corp. office in Kansas City.

In any of the three scenarios, depositors will continue to have direct access to their funds as long as their accounts do not exceed the federally insured maximum of $100,000, Gish said.

Madison County Federal, based in Granite City, was placed in conservatorship in March 1989 after suffering heavy losses.

The savings and loan has its main office at 3600 Nameoki Road and branches at 101 S. Morrison Ave., Collinsville; 1 Ginger Creek Meadows, Edwardsville; and 120 W. Market St., Troy.

Resolution Trust Corp. is awaiting 85 savings and loans in 12 states. The RTC has disposed of 11 savings and loans, most of which have been sold, Gish said.

When institutions are sold, they remain open and depositors can continue to transact business, he said.

There has been informal interest in the purchase of Madison County Federal, said Dick Fischman of the RTC.

When the savings and loan is put on the sale block, a meeting of potential purchasers will be held, Gish said.

If a savings and loan is liquidated, depositors with sums not exceeding $100,000 would be paid off within a week, he said. Checks are usually handed out at one or more of the savings and loan's offices. Rumors that it could take several months are inaccurate, Gish said.

Man charged in shooting

MADISON — A 30-year-old Madison man has been charged with attempted murder in the shooting of a Venice man last week.

Joseph Watts, also known as Joseph Woods, is accused of shooting Lennil Johnson, 23, in the mouth and back last Thursday.

Police said the shooting took place in the 900 block of West Madison Street in Madison after the two had quarreled.

Johnson was shot in the upper lip and twice in the back. Police said he was recovering in an undisclosed hospital.

Watts was charged with attempted first-degree murder, armed violence and aggravated battery.

The charges were issued last week but not registered until Watts turned himself in Monday to the Madison County Sheriff's Department in Edwardsville.

Watts is being held in the Madison County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond.

STRIKING MEATCUTTER Gary Bohnenstiel in front of Leroy's Market in Pontoon Beach. Meatcutters Local 534 has been without a contract for 10 months.

Butchers picket Leroy's Market

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

PONTON BEACH — Butchers at Leroy's A&J Market, 4089 Pontoon Road, went on strike Tuesday.

The three butchers, members of Meatcutters Local 534, have been without a contract for 10 months, union officials said.

The union and the store's owner, Jim Luesse, differ on what is holding up a settlement. Luesse said he has given in on just about every provision requested, except his right to work behind the meat counter.

The union is unhappy with wages, seniority and working conditions.

Luesse said he is a paid-up member of the local. "What it boils down to is they don't want me working behind my own meat counter."

Luesse bought the store from its previous owner in September 1988. "I'm still in the union," he said. "I'm still pay my dues."

"But I don't have any control over how much work there is for meatcutters. That's up to the customers. If the work's not there, they shouldn't expect me to employ somebody. What they're telling me, essentially, is I'd have to lay myself off first."

"He did not give in to all the demands," said Michael Taylor, president of Local 534. "If he had given in, there wouldn't be any pickets outside."

Taylor said he suspects Luesse doesn't want to guarantee job security for his employees, so that he and his father can do most of the butcher's work and employ some low-salaried wrappers, "and maybe lay off all his meatcutters altogether."

Luesse and Taylor both said Luesse was willing to give his meatcutters a raise of $1.15 an hour over two years. Luesse said the local wanted an additional year on the contract, like the one struck between the local and the supermarket chains last year.

Luesse's meatcutters currently make $13.04 an hour.

Both sides said Luesse was unwilling to make raises retroactive to contract expiration.

Meanwhile, 10 clerks who work at Leroy's have crossed the picket line. The clerks are members of United Food and Commerce Workers Local 881. A union spokesman said union did not return calls Wednesday.

Granite's development plan to be public hearing subject

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A public hearing to discuss a new Comprehensive Development Plan for the city will be held at 7 p.m. April 5 at the Granite City Township Hall.

The plan, prepared for the city by Campbell Design Group of St. Louis, is designed to set city policy concerning how and where the city should grow.

According to the plan's introduction, it should help the city reach its full potential in providing an appropriate environment for present and future residents. "It's a top priority," and "do all those things that create and maintain the fond memories that comprise a hometown."

According to the plan's final summary, its purpose is to recommend some actions that will assist the city in "achieving what can be."

"It does not force the future, it does not accept only one possibility. It does not dictate what should be."

"In final form, the plan represents the input and efforts of many people to a process that will require the input and effort of many more people.

"The underlying theme of the plan is that an outcome of community participation for Granite City is that together the city can turn around the decline of the last two decades and regain its status as a leading employer of the region."

"It can build upon its industrial and transportation base and expand into the future urban area in a controlled, comprehensive manner."

"Granite City can be the city it wants to be."

Work on the new Comprehensive Plan began in August 1988 under the guidance of the city Plan Commission. More than an inch thick, the plan details the future of the entire city.

The last comprehensive plan was prepared in 1968. According to the present Plan Commission, that 20-year plan envisioned a pattern of growth and prosperity that did not materialize and its guidance and recommendations were largely ignored.

The new plan, through a set of goals and objectives specifically addresses issues that the Plan Commission, other city officials, the city staff and area residents said — during the preparation pro

Venice council tempers cool

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

VENICE — The City Council conducted itself in considerably more restrained fashion Tuesday than it had during its last few meetings, during which a proposed widening of Broadway near City Hall was the subject of heated debate.

The project, approved two years ago, came up again at a recent council meeting. Alderman Henry Fletcher directed a question to City Attorney Casper Nighoghossian concerning what kind of parliamentary procedure governs the council.

At issue was whether the project, voted down once, was again capable of being brought up again two years later, and whether Alderman Silver Franklin had the right to bring it up again.

Nighoghossian's reply boiled down to this: "You can make up rules as you go along." Best to have the answer to a question voted on at the time against Franklin bring it up.

Mayor Tyrone Echols said it was just "a technicality who brought it up." With five votes in favor of the project on the second vote, the project would have passed anyway, he said.

Echols pointed out that the Park Board must still approve the project because it entails taking a 10-foot strip of land off Lee Park.

Echols added, "I don't want to see the city torn apart over this. I brought it up."

The project would widen Broadway between City Hall and the Venice Recreation Center to provide for 45-degree parking. Echols' critics had charged that the project was conceived to benefit the Venice Currency Exchange across the street. Echols owned the currency exchange with son Tyrone Jr.

Fletcher said, "I'm not jealous of anybody, how many businesses there are on Broadway or anything. But the people have been asking that it be put on the ballot."

"I feel we should let the people decide. The park belongs to all the people of Venice, not just us aldermen."

Echols responded, "Every time a $15,000 project comes up you can't hold a referendum. You would spend as much money on the election as on the projects. You were elected to govern the city ... Wouldn't we look grand to put a referendum out

Remington's: Tickets hurt business

By Dick Mann
Correspondent

PONTOON BEACH — Customers of Remington's restaurant who have been forced to park on the street when the parking lot is full have done so at the risk of getting a parking ticket.

The street where tickets have been placed on parked vehicles is Chouteau Trace Parkway.

Obviously, according to Remington's owners Dan Krekovich and Mike Kramer, that is detrimental to business. They brought up the issue at the Village Board meeting on Tuesday.

The two said the ticketing of cars by Pontoon Beach police was especially a problem on weekends.

The board agreed to give Remington's 60 days to complete an extension of its parking lot. The owners say they will accommodate the needs for on-the-street parking for its customers.

Mayor Glen Wilson said police will be instructed not to issue parking tickets to Remington's customers who park on the street while the expanded parking lot is being constructed.

Opened on Nov. 2, 1989, the restaurant is located near Interstate 270 and Illinois Route 111.

The soup, made from a secret recipe Ravanello invented for his restaurant, is served Mondays and Fridays. The president has made his dislike for broccoli known recently.

Cancer Society targets April for pointing out food values

Sometimes picking a fight is a good idea.

That's the message of the American Cancer Society's Great American Food Fight Against Cancer, on April 19.

It's a lighthearted event with a serious message. The right food may be our best ammunition in the fight against certain cancers.

Studies show that diet alone might account for as much as 35 percent of all cancer cases, except for those of the skin.

The American Cancer Society recommends that Americans eat more foods rich in vitamins A and C, low in fat and sodium. In other words, plenty of cabbage, family or cruciferous vegetables, to reduce the risk of some cancers.

The ACS battle cry is for simple, inexpensive yet delicious changes in eating habits. Making strategic choices when cooking, shopping and dining out can be done gradually, the group says.

Battlegrounds for the Great American Food Fight Against Cancer include homes, restaurants, supermarkets, work sites, hospitals and schools.

"We also can continue the good fight by giving to the American Cancer Society annual fund-raising drive, the Community Crusade," a spokesman said.

Studies indicate that high fat content foods may play a role in cancers of the colon, rectum, prostate and breast.

Fat might have an initiating effect on some cancers and a promoting effect on others.

Researchers have not pinned down the roles of different kinds of fat (e.g., saturated, mono-unsaturated, polyunsaturated, and cholesterol), but total fat intake seems to be the most important factor.

High-fat diets are likely to be high-calorie diets. Fat-loaded calories most likely will mean a weight gain, especially if a person is not getting much exercise.

Obesity, defined as being 40 percent or more overweight, could increase the risk of colon, breast and uterine cancers.

Reducing fat intake means eating fewer high-fat foods. Many of these, such as dairy products, meat, nuts and seeds, provide vital nutrients for good health and need not be avoided completely.

Fats carry fat-soluble vitamins A, D and E; fatty deposits serve as reservoirs for energy and protectors of vital organs.

Fat should account for only 30 percent or less of daily calories. For a person consuming approximately 2,000 calories a day, that means 600 to 700 milligrams of fat. Reducing intake to 30 percent fat would involve only 200 calories or 22 grams of fat, the same amount contained in one tablespoon of mayonnaise.

The ACS advises:

- Reduce fat intake by choosing lean meats, trimming away all visible fat, and serving 2-3 ounces per meal.
- Use less butter, margarine and oils. Instead, use more herbs and spices to flavor meats and vegetables.

-Cook foods by steaming, poaching, boiling, microwaving or star-frying them.

-Use vegetable cooking sprays instead of frying in fat. Avoid cooking in fatty sauces and gravies.

-Rich desserts can be the largest contributors of fat in diets. Choose low-fat alternatives such as fruit or frozen yogurt.

-Excellent sources of fiber include breads and cereals containing 4.5 grams or more of fiber per serving (read product labels), dried beans, prunes, apricots and figs.

Good sources of fiber are cereals and breads containing 2 or more grams of fiber per serving, corn, peas, beans, sweet potatoes, potatoes, Brussels sprouts, blueberries, dates, raisins, apples, pears and oranges.

Studies seem to support an association between high-fiber diets and low incidence of cancer and other diseases of the colon.

The exact mechanism is not known but could be related to dilution of intestinal contents and speeding up their passage through the colon.

Scientists aren't sure whether fiber itself or the presence of fiber interacting with other components in foods might be the protective factor. But the answer to getting more fiber in the diet is not to take fiber supplements.

Eating high-fiber foods can be a healthy substitute for high-calorie, high-fat foods.

Experts don't agree on which may be best for good health, but most agree that intake should be increased gradually.

Switching to high-fiber breads and cereals is considered a good start. The first ingredient (listed in contents) should be a whole-grain flour like whole wheat, All-Bran.

Use beans, lentils and peas. Add cooked beans and peas to soups, stews, casseroles and salads.

At least once a week, serve a meatless dish made with dried beans or peas.

Use fresh or dried fruits for desserts and snacks. Fresh fruit instead of juice for breakfast will give more fiber.

Leave the skins on potatoes, fruits and vegetables.

Nuts and seeds, though high in fiber, are also high in fat, so use them sparingly.

Catholic office for missions tops $1 million in receipts in past year

SPRINGFIELD — Catholics in the diocese of Springfield in Illinois contributed more than $1 million to missions in 1989, it was announced last week.

According to the 1989 financial report of the Office for Missions, $1,182,556 was collected through the donations of school children, parish mission appeals and bequests.

Much of the $1 million total, $721,797, was raised through designated gifts such as wills, trusts and annuities.

"We have never had so many wills, effective in one year's time," said Fr. Kevin Sullivan, director of the Office for Missions.

Sullivan expects that trend to continue.

"More and more people are seeing planned giving to the missions as an excellent way to show their concern for the people of God throughout the world," he said.

All of the money that comes in to the diocesan mission office is distributed through various mission organizations, the Society of the Propagation of the Faith, the Holy Childhood Association and the American Board of Catholic Missions.

Receipts from the annual Mission Sunday Appeal, taken up annually on the second Sunday of Lent, are distributed between foreign missions and U.S. missions — 60 percent and 40 percent of the collection, respectively.

Mission Sunday this year was March 11.

All of the other funds that come into the diocesan Mission Office are sent to the National Office of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith for distribution worldwide.

In his annual report to the diocese, published Feb. 25 in Catholic Times, the official diocesan newspaper, Sullivan acknowledged the children of the diocese.

For the year 1989, they were second in the nation in per capita contributions to missions.

During the 1989-90 school year, the children in diocesan parochial schools and in parish religious education programs contributed $64,820 to missions.

That is $2.87 for each of the 22,600 Catholic students in the diocese.

Last year, the diocese was recognized at the national conference for missions for having the highest overall 10-year standing in the nation in mission contributions.

The 28 counties in the Springfield Diocese are: Adams, Bond, Brown, Calhoun, Cass, Christian, Clark, Coles, Crawford, Cumberland, Douglas, Effingham, Edgar, Fayette, Greene, Jasper, Jersey, Macoupin, Macoupin, Madison, Menard, Montgomery, Morgan, Moultrie, Pike, Sangamon, Scott and Shelby.

John Becker, tenor banjo.

A professional musician since 1937, Becker became well known during the era of St. Louis' Gas Light Square entertainment area. He starred at the Edinburgh, Scotland, jazz festival last year.

Glenn Meyer, clarinet.

Meyer is a civil engineer for St. Louis County, produced and was featured in a noted "clarinet summit" concert in 1989 and another is planned in 1990.

Patrick Joyce, piano.

Joyce began playing the piano when four years old and has been performing in a large variety of clubs and restaurants. Joyce has performed Becker for a "mind-boggling single-string banjo technique." Joyce for "awesome pianistics," Meyer for "lilting, swinging melodies" and Lehr as a sousaphonist with "incredible virtuosity and brute physical strength."

They play a variety of jazz, pop and swing tunes of the 1920s, '30s and '40s and the ragtime music of the masters — Scott Joplin, Joseph Lamb and James Scott.

Sounds like policy needed

Their family pet was put to sleep last weekend, and Schley and Karen Martin aren't happy about it.

The Nameoki Township dog catcher picked up the Martins' dog March 16. Because that day was a Friday, the regular day for trips to the county dog pound, the dog was supposed to be the pound the same day. The pound apparently tried to notify the Martins through information found on the dog's tag, that the county had their pet in custody. But the Martins didn't receive the county's letter until the day after the dog was destroyed.

A couple of things need to be addressed. First, the county or the township should adopt a policy mandating contact with the affected family, prior to euthanasia. How about a five-day "cooling off period"? Five days would seem to be a reasonable amount of time for a family to track down a lost pet, and certainly holding an animal wouldn't be that much more inconvenience.

Second, dogs captured so close to the weekend should automatically get a little extra time before euthanasia. That would avoid weekend communication delays.

Township Supervisor Lee Ridgeway said no one is around the township to feed the dogs during the weekend. That seems a problem easily resolved. Either get somebody to feed them, or don't pick up any new dogs after the last batch is taken to the county on Fridays.

The township board has acknowledged shortcomings in its guidelines and is studying new ones. That is the best thing that can be said about this sad case.

Preparing for the cleanup

In coming days you'll be reading plenty about the annual spring cleanup in our community. It's because we're proud of the city and want to do the most we can to spruce it up.

The annual Stash Trash campaign takes place April 21, but much is already going on behind the scenes to ensure its success. A poster coloring contest is being sponsored among local schools. Community groups are making their plans for participation. And scouting members are gearing up.

Local volunteers on the Community Pride Committee of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce are putting together all the pieces to make sure the event is a success.

Last year, more than 83 tons of trash was collected along main highways. More than 1,000 participated, either in organized or individual effort. We are certain to see as many if not more this year, judging from preliminary head counts.

A new element is being planned this year, in cooperation with the Press-Record/Journal. It's an as-yet unnamed honor that will allow neighbors to cite other neighbors who show pride in the appearance of their property. You'll be reading more about this in coming weeks.

Keep an eye out for a banner at the corner of Johnson and Nameoki roads. That will serve as a reminder of the dates.

Anyone wishing to participate in the cleanup may call R.C. or Shirley Bush at the chamber, 876-6400.

Change S&L seizure rules

Aside from the technicalities of whether federal takeovers of insolvent thrift institutions are constitutional, a March 20 court ruling perhaps could have an impact here.

Olympic Federal Savings and Loan of Berwyn, Ill., obtained a decision that the top S&L regulator lacks authority to seize it. John Lanigan, Olympic's chief executive, said, "Under new capital requirements we would have had to raise $30 million to $40 million in two months. The new rules just don't provide thrifts with enough time."

"Once you are taken over your franchise takes a dive," he said. "We make mortgages; we make student loans. All of this would have been shut down. Not all thrifts are like those in Texas or California; we have good deposits and healthy investments. We'll be around for another 100 years."

Certainly, once they are under conservatorship, S&Ls seem to be doomed. Madison County Federal Savings of Granite City faces, by June, sale to another S&L or liquidation. National S&L bailout costs keep rising and already are more than Uncle Sam can afford. We hope the Berwyn court challenge prompts the government to rethink and fine-tune its approach to this problem.

'Green' hatred driven home

I hate money. Hate it. Hate it.

And the money-growers of America didn't convince me to take it if they were giving it away. My mother told me when I was little that if I didn't take money, I wouldn't amount to anything.

I forced it on me. Every night at the supper table I received unhealthy doses. With the meat loaf came an envelope with tens. With the tuna fish there was always a roll of quarters. I cried. But I took it because Mom said it was best for me. "Take your money," she'd say soothingly, "and you'll grow up to be President of the United States."

Who am I to argue with Mom? For 30 years I took my lumps. And suddenly, it dawned on me: I'm still not President of the United States!

But now that I've grown up, I've made a decision. Be it as it may. So I've given and I'll just give it to somebody who really needs it. After all, there's a lot of hungry people out there. Of course, now that I've laid the issue on the table, a lot of things will happen. The first will be all you liberals sending in your cash, encouraging me to "just try it." You figure I'll be forced to eat my words and accept your generous offer.

But that's trying out just the right combination. I'll be swayed. A couple of twenties here. A few sawbucks there. "Maybe even a Thomas Jefferson $2 bill."

Dennis Grubaugh

But this time I'll stand firm. Mom's not hovering over my shoulder anymore, cramping that money down my throat. I've grown up and I just don't have time for that.

Now, my wife's a different story. She loves money. Loves it, loves it, loves it. The kids do, too. The little rascals. And that suits me just fine. It gives me an excuse for getting rid of all the moolah that people try to force on me.

I'm sure I've insulted somebody. Either a foreman at the Federal Reserve. To them, I'm sorry. I've seen them. I'll have a follow-up statement in a few days explaining my intentions, but the way I figure it if I didn't have any need for money at the age of 5, I sure don't have any need for it today, do I?

For more on this, you've been asked for an opinion. I pondered that. I don't know much about domestic problems. And I'm not much on foreign policy or even debt reduction. But I do know I hate that awful green stuff.

And I'm not talking broccoli.

Avoid child care operated by government

To the editor:

The question of proper and adequate care of today's children is one of the most serious problems this nation faces.

Abuses of children range from simple neglect and inadequate care to torture and death.

Without question the best, most efficient, most effective and least costly child care is that provided in the traditional family home by a loving and caring mother. But because many mothers are being forced to leave their children to work outside the home to supplement the family income, this is far too often true.

Government is predominant role in this situation. Government contributes to creating and perpetuating this deplorable situation and has the obligation to take immediate and positive steps to relieve it.

Governments local, state and federal are taking the first four and a quarter months of the average families' earnings in taxes. It is surprising that mothers need to add to the family income. Adding insult to injury, a third of her earnings are taken by government in taxes.

Mothers who leave their children to pursue employment are equally forced into two categories:

First, those who are forced to seek employment to supplement the income necessary to provide adequate necessities. Moral consciousness would tell government to cease negative contributions to this situation.

Government relief to these families should be in the form of up to $1,000 income tax credit, I repeat credit, not deduction, for each member of the family provided the mother has no earnings from out-of-the-home employment.

These income tax credits should also apply to mothers of a mother employed outside the home if she is a widowed or divorced head of the family. In addition, a mother's earnings derived from part-time in-home activities such as typewriting, bookkeeping, tutoring, baby sitting, etc., should be exempt from all forms of taxation.

This would provide incentives for mothers to provide the care for their children.

Also, it would be inducing mothers to seek out-of-home employment that involves further eroding of family income to pay for child care, or to leave the children in day care.

The reduction in government revenue would be less than the costs required by the creation of expensive, ineffective, inefficient self-perpetuating systems to administer any government involvement in child care.

The costs of government child care would be paid by additional taxes, further depleting the already overtaxed family earning and exacerbating and perpetuating the current deplorable situation.

The second basic category of mothers who are forced outside the home are those who voluntarily choose to place their personal desires for careers or material luxuries above their innate responsibility to provide for the children they produce, the children's care and nurturing to which every child is entitled.

The parents of children of mothers in this second group should be firmly held responsible for the cost of the care and well being of their children.

It is immoral as well as ridiculous to attempt to foist the cost and responsibility of these parents on society through government's bureaucratic control of taxpayer's expense.

Of course, there are other child care situations demanding considered attention which this alone does not correct.

However, it certainly would not be in major government-induced negative contribution to the current child care problems.

Fight 'toll phones' slated for Illinois homes

To the editor:

For Illinois Bell customers, the first shoe dropped on Jan. 1 when our line charges went up.

The Illinois Commerce Commission gave Illinois Bell this increase although the hearing examiner recommended a rate reduction.

The ICC also authorized a second increase. On July 1, the other and much bigger shoe will drop when more Illinois Bell customers will be required to pay for every local call they make. It is called local measured service or LMS.

This increase for us in Metro East means that, if we make three local calls during peak times and one local call during off-peak times, our phone bills will increase by about 34 percent.

If we make more calls than that, our cost will rise more.

The Illinois Citizens Utility

Board (CUB) is still fighting this in court. It is also supporting Illinois House Bill 2942.

The bill would require phone companies to allow customers the choice between a flat rate, as is now charged, or the new measured service.

I urge Illinois Bell customers to vote for HB 2942. Better yet, they should tell state officials to support the entire CUB legislative agenda.

The best thing they could do to fight LMS is to help the CUB circulate petitions and have a toll phone in your home.

Not everyone can circulate petitions, but all could help in this struggle by sending to CUB a $5 membership, a fraction of what the phone company is getting every month.

Praises quick, skilled Granite City police, fire, ambulance service

To the editor:

I live in Kirkpatrick Homes next to a street that doesn't have a sign or a name.

I've seen two accidents in the three months I've been living here. Three of the cars had children and adults who were trapped in the car, and one child pedestrian that was hit was injured very seriously.

It's a very dangerous street.

Instantly the policemen, firemen and ambulance service were there and helped save victims' lives both times.

I would like to personally thank the policemen, firemen and ambulance service.

We have great teamwork in Granite City.

Help fight strikebreaking

To the editor:

Law relations took a sharp turn for the worse in the 1980s when bosses began using a 1938 Supreme Court ruling to, in effect, fire tens of thousands of workers who were exercising their right to strike.

Now that 52-year-old decision is being used to weaponize strikes and threaten workers across the nation — from steel and paper workers to football players and pilots — and put the phrase "permanent replacement" into America's labor vocabulary.

Now, two bills would overturn that court decision, as well as a more recent Supreme Court ruling employers have used to coerce strikers back across the picket line.

HR 3936 and S 2112 would ban employers from hiring permanent replacements and prohibit offering preferential benefits to strikers who break the picket line and return to work. They are in the labor committees.

Most social historians credit Pres. Reagan's firing and replacing 12,000 air traffic controllers as the opening barrage in a new attack on labor rights.

Employers around the country changed tactics and began to hire "scabs" as permanent replacements.

In 1986, shortly before a strike by TWA flight attendants, the airline said it would not only hire permanent replacements and continue to do so if an agent did not strike. TWA promised to pay for anyone who crossed the picket lines.

In addition, TWA said that when the strike ended, striking attendants would be on the bottom of the seniority list for any job opening — no matter how long they had been at the airline.

The court ruled those threats, which could coerce workers to not strike, were across the picket line, were legal.

Get in touch with your senators or representative and urge them to co-sponsor S 2112 or HR 3936 to help level the playing field during labor disputes.

Lead!

Looking at poisoning in children the culprit may be house dust

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Lead is poison.

Some historians speculate that the moral decay of the Roman Empire, which ultimately led to its decline and fall, was a direct result of lead poisoning caused by the Roman use of lead plumbing.

Much more recently, the death of artist Andy Warhol was attributed to lead poisoning, which resulted from his preference for hand-made pottery cooking and eating utensils, many of which had a lead-based glaze.

Now, lead in the stories of lead poisoning from lead-based paint in American inner-city ghettos surfaced again and again and led to removal of lead paint from both buildings and the marketplace.

Childhood lead poisoning is still so widespread in the United States it is one of the few diseases the U.S. Centers for Disease Control measures as a public health concern of children rather than as a rate per 1,000 or per 10,000 children.

Because significant steps have been taken to limit child lead exposure from other sources, including food grown in contaminated soil, prevention of lead-contaminated soil and household dust has become the primary focus in prevention of childhood lead poisoning.

From a public health perspective, lead levels which mean identifying an area where children are suffering from lead poisoning and eliminating the source, or means, of contamination.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, however, is in the business of reducing or eliminating risk at sites where it identifies a potential source of contamination.

The clash between these philosophies has caused some of the local controversy surrounding the EPA's planned $25 million Taracorp Superfund cleanup of lead-contaminated soil in Granite City, Madison, Venice and Eagle Park.

Local government officials, backed by Tom Long of the Illinois Department of Public Health, have called for testing of blood lead levels in residents rather than as a rate per 1,000 or per 10,000 children.

They say a study of present health problems, if any, is essential in order to make a decision about prevention of health problems in the future.

Brad Bradley, the EPA's Taracorp project manager, said the blood testing would have no effect on cleanup plans because it would only show past contamination and future risk.

The EPA's plan calls for the removal of all residential soil which has a lead level of 500 parts per million or greater.

Governor Jim Edgar and others say a limit of 1,000 ppm — suggested in a study by NL Industries, former owner of the site — is more realistic.

The local concern is that at sites designated for cleanup under the Superfund program, contamination of soil and resulting exposure to people from the soil is perhaps the predominant pathway of exposure.

But, according to "The Centers for Disease Control Perspective of Lead in Soil" by Henry Fawcett and others, "to understand properly the role of soil lead in childhood lead poisoning, we will need to have additional scientific studies on the relative and absolute contributions of soil lead to blood lead levels in a variety of settings."

"This will help us put soil lead into perspective vis-a-vis other sources of lead and will give us an estimate of the benefits to be obtained by abating or removing soil lead."

"We need to think more broadly and creatively of ways to prevent soil lead exposure other than by removing 6 to 12 inches of soil in the vicinity of all contaminated areas."

"... It is especially important to see how any soil lead abatement program will fit into a total remediation program for children poisoned by lead in their home environment."

There have been several studies of lead contamination in homes.

A study titled "Lead Exposure in Young Children from Dust and Soil in the United Kingdom" by Iain Thornton, D.J.A. Davies, J.M. Smith and J. Quinn, found the most significant pathway for lead exposure in children was through household dust, attributing this in part to the fact most British children spend more time playing indoors than outdoors.

This study recommended that future studies concentrate on household dust rather than soil.

Soil tests in Baltimore and Boston also showed household dust to be one of the most significant pathways for lead contamination in children.

Daniel Vornberg, environmental manager at the smelter, said keeping the community informed about the dangers associated with lead, and the company's steps to lessen them, is an important role of industry.

No one, he said, wants a health problem in the community and the company attempts to make sure none exists.

Dot Run offers free blood testing for lead to members of the community five days a week at its plant health clinic. About two to six persons a week take advantage of the testing, Vornberg said.

Local residents aren't panicked by bad news about the dangers of lead, he said; in fact, convincing them there is a danger can be tough.

"It's not like we're talking about X number of people being exposed to a new chemical," Vornberg said.

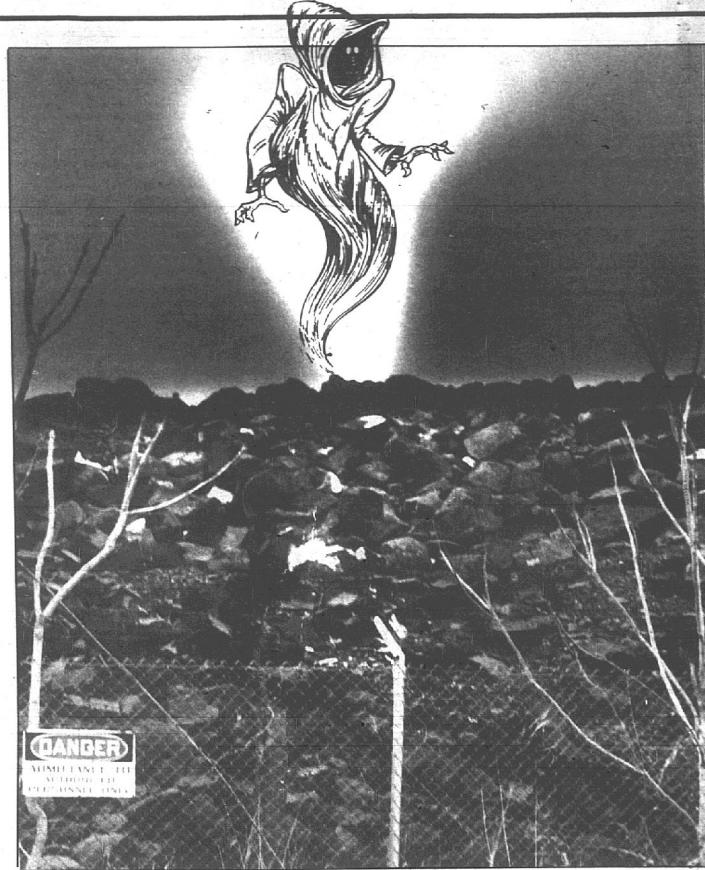

"... People have lived here for years and their father, or grandfather, who died when he was 80 years old, worked here and didn't have a problem.

"So they have this attitude nothing happened, even when the lead levels were two times as high and there were no respirators worn.... They have this backdrop to compare lead against."

In addition to publicizing the company's results in lead exposure programs every year, Vornberg said, the company is "big on people programs. We want everyone to be aware of the newest ways to reduce exposure."

Vornberg said the company will have a booth at the Jefferson County Health Fair this weekend, trying to get more information out.

"We want people to be more comfortable, not satisfied necessarily, but more comfortable with what's being done and make sure people know what they need to know," he said.

SPECTRE in the form of lead poisoning from the Taracorp pile and former lead smelter in Granite City is haunting Granite City, Madison, Venice and Eagle Park. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has included soil removal in its cleanup plans, but some studies indicate lead in household dust may be the biggest villain in childhood lead poisoning.

concerning the soil removal proposal for Granite City:

• Household dust lead would appear to pose the greatest danger to children.

• Digging up yards would create dust that would spread into homes.

• Wet soil is mud (wetting contaminated soil before removal is a common EPA practice to reduce dust). Mud, tracked into homes, becomes household dust.

• Decreasing the amount of contaminated soil could increase the amount of contaminated household dust.

• Is the cure worse, in the long run, than the problem?

The EPA's Bradley said Vornberg's is a "legitimate concern."

He said the possibility of an "acute short-term effect" is part of the criteria that must be considered when establishing a cleanup plan. While soil removal will create some dust, he said, wind will disperse it so it can be kept to a minimum.

When the EPA is done, Bradley said, the area should be safe from lead, based on current knowledge of its dangers.

He said that although there now is no set level of lead that is considered safe, the cleanup goes beyond a lot of the former standards for lead contamination and should meet the standards established as a result of current study.

Should this prove wrong in the future, he said, "the contamination was created by NL Industries. Its responsibility doesn't end with this cleanup."

"It can't say, 'We've done our job and any problem with contamination from now on is the residents' responsibility.' That's not the way it works."

Fall election choices include tough decisions for Metro East voters

Last week's primary election has set the stage for all-out political warfare leading up to the general election in November.

Most East voters must consider two factors:

• Which candidates would do the best job if elected?

• What impact would their victories have on this region?

PAWNEAGE POWER has decreased greatly compared to past generations, but many paid jobs and unpaid appointments are affected by the outcome of statewide election campaigns.

Jim Thompson, a Republican, is completing his 14th consecutive term as governor and will turn the state's top office over to either a fellow Republican, Secretary of State Jim Edgar, or Attorney General Neil Hartigan, a Democrat.

After a long drought for the local area, a Democratic stronghold, Edgar is leading in the polls, but Democrats plan an all-out effort to put Hartigan into the Executive Mansion at Springfield.

WITH EDGAR LEAVING the post of secretary of state, Republicans hope to retain that office by electing the current lieutenant governor, George Ryan, but he has formidable State Treasurer Jim Quinn, a confirmed Democratic nominee.

If elected as the new attorney general, will State Comptroller Ward B. Burris continue the existing network of regional offices, including the eight-county headquarters in downtown Granite City?

Burris is opposed by Republican Jim Ryan, not to be confused with George Ryan or Jim Thompson or Jim Burns, the latter running for lieutenant governor in tandem with Hartigan. Edgar's running mate is Bob Kustra.

A SURE THING — and there are few sure things in politics — is that a woman will be elected as the next state comptroller, succeeding Burris.

It will be either Democrat Dawn Clark Netsch, a state senator, or Republican Susan Suter, a former Thompson cabinet member.

Edgar was a Thompson cabinet member until being appointed secretary of state and has since proven to be an able campaigner and vote-getter in his own right.

Still another state cabinet official, Greg Balow, is the Republican nominee for state treasurer, facing Democrat Patrick Quinn.

QUINN HAS LED a number of popular causes, including shrinking the size of the Illinois House of Representatives. The House was trimmed from 177 to 118 seats.

A Chicago-style Ralph Nader, consumer-advocate Quinn has been an irritant to many, who sometimes hit back at him by questioning whether he can work effectively with other officials, elected or appointed.

As chief of the Coalition for Political Honesty, Quinn has fought for principles that he says waste tax funds. As Illinois treasurer, he might run the office with a number of cost-cutting goals in mind, endeavoring himself to tax-averse citizens but setting off a lot of political and procedural fireworks.

There certainly would be no dull moments.

SPEAKING OF FIREWORKS, U.S. Senator Paul Simon, Democrat, and his November challenger, U.S. Rep. Lynn Martin, Republican, already are airing radio and television commercials. The ads are positive at this point, but the ads are negative, reflecting the half of the increase that goes to education but perhaps eliminating the half that goes to non-education.

Simon has resisted the temptation to point out that Martin has called southern Illinois voters

"rednecks."

Martin is said to be weighing an attack on the senator for missing some votes in Washington while he campaigned for the presidency.

Simon will be praised as a lawman who can command respect, "leadership that can cure."

Martin wants everyone to know that she is a woman and a professional who is tough, smart and a professorial in the best sense of the word.

READ MY LIPS? Neither nominee for governor has quite said that, but taxation looms as a big issue — specifically, the 20 percent two-year state income tax increase adopted in 1989.

Edgar has indicated he favors making the increase permanent. Hartigan hints he would continue the half of the increase that goes to education but perhaps eliminating the half that goes to non-education.

Each stance is being fine-tuned, and each candidate no doubt will stress the importance of "reforming" and lowering real estate property taxes to offset at least part of the higher income tax.

STAY IN TOUCH, because taxation obviously is a highly sensitive issue. No one can afford to yield the high ground to his opponent indefinitely.

If Hartigan and Edgar try to outpromise each other, by the time the next seven months have come and gone, people may turn to other sources, so shaken that state services and assistance may have to be cut back drastically.

And that could be almost as unpopular as high taxes.

WHO DO YOU TRUST? to represent you in important state offices, and will you feel the same way this fall as you do now?

Ideally, there will be more "rednecks" in the state. "Differences" between the stands that are taken, enabling you to make a sound choice based on your awareness of the issues and how you feel about those issues.

Oldest residence in state being restored

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

NORTH Dupo — Like parents watching their child take his first steps, members of the Prairie du Pont Preservation Society are looking forward to the first steps of their baby — the historic Martin-Boisemenu House.

Construction of a pole barn over the home was scheduled to get underway March 26, according to Linda Hay, spokesman for the society. "I'm just so excited that all of this is finally happening," Hay said.

The barn was financed with a grant to Sugar Loaf Township by the St. Clair County Intergovernmental Grants Department. "Al Hayes of the grants department has rolled up his sleeves on this and gone out of his way to assure its success," Hay said.

She also credited the efforts of Township Supervisor Don Thompson, Highway Commissioner Jerry Chartran, County Board members, and the Dupo and the Alton Standard.

The grant, applied for by engineer John Kremmer, was made possible by the recent acceptance of the home in the National Register of Historic Places. The approval came Feb. 9.

The barn, a temporary scaffold with a fascia-sheet metal roof, will allow the demolition of a second story, which was added to the home in 1913, and protect the structure while a new roof is constructed.

Jack Luer of Luer and Associates recommended the barn be built. He donated his services by preparing drawings of the barn.

The poles were donated by Illinois Power Co., whose employees volunteered to set them in the ground. Construction materials were supplied by the Granite Central Lumber of Alton to the building contractor, Roy Corp.

The society has been working with the historic home for nine years. In November, it was named the oldest known residence in Illinois based on information dating the house to 1790.

"It's our bicentennial home in the year for the bicentennial," Hay said. St. Clair County will also turn 200 this year.

Pierre Martin, the home's first occupant, is listed in the census of William St. Clair, for whom St. Clair County is named, as the resident head of family in Prairie du Pont — the former name of North Dupo.

The home is about 80 percent intact, a factor that will assist the restoration efforts.

"The architects will be able to look at the saw marks in the timbers and tell what the pitch of the roof was," Hay said. The aged rafters also will help determine how far out the front and rear galleries' porches which ran the length of the house — extend.

With the home named to the Register, restoration plans made, building surveys done, and the mortgage retired in December 1989, the future is looking bright.

"It's a wonderful feeling," Hay said. "It was such a financial drain (the mortgage) and now we no longer have to look backward, we can look forward."

Now we're going to be moving forward. We've got the money to get a (restoration) plan, and now we've got to get the money to get the project started — that's phase three," Hay said. "It's phase three that we're greatly concerned about."

The society has applied for a $20,000 federal matching grant from the National Historical Preservation Act to help with the actual restoration, Hay said. That grant would finance the restoration of the home's vertical logs, sills, and original flooring and ceilings.

The restoration plans, building surveys and other archaeological explorations will be done with a $12,500 IHPA grant.

"It's the 30th anniversary of the restoration of the Old Cahokia Courthouse," Hay said. "This (Martin-Boisemenu House) is probably the most important restoration project to hit St. Clair County since that time. While the progress continues, however, the cost for money increases."

"We have always been fortunate to have help from people all over the state but we always need more," Hay said.

Those who wish to make donations may send them to: Prairie du Pont Preservation Society, Route 1, Box 377, East Carondelet, Ill. 62240 in care of Myrtle Donigan, treasurer.

Leadership Council promoting international commerce here

"Because of the link with the Mississippi River through the port districts, the Southeast Illinois area will continue to build its strategic position as an international transportation and distribution center through the decade of the '90s."

That's the position voiced by Jim Pennekamp, executive director of Leadership Council Southwestern Illinois.

"We're in the center of things — and not only regionally and nationally," said Pennekamp.

"With the opening of the Melvin Price Locks and Dam project at Alton, we're going to be able to better compete in the world market."

Official decommissioning activities for old Locks and Dam No. 26 and the opening of the new Locks and Dam site are scheduled for May 11, according to Chuck Franco, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, acting public affairs chief.

The Corps of Engineers is in charge of construction on the locks and dam.

The project is being built, Franco said, to replace the existing Locks and Dam No. 26 because of the old facilities' structural deterioration and inadequate locking capacity.

He said traffic at locks and Dam No. 26 increased from 1.4 million tons of commerce in 1988 when the river facilities were originally constructed, to approximately 71 million tons in

"For several years," Pennekamp noted.

"Barge transportation is one of the most cost-effective ways a company can ship its products," Wydra said. "And with the Melvin Price Locks and Dam and the new Locks and Dam site, we're providing an incentive for international businesses to do more business within the Midwest."

Another incentive, according to Wydra, is the opening of a new warehouse at Foreign Trade Zone 31, which is operated by the Tri-City Port.

The warehouse, in Madison, opened on March 28.

The 150,000-square-foot warehouse will be used to expand on the existing 423,000 square feet of Foreign Trade Zone space.

"We can offer the same flexibility and security that the international businessman is looking for," Wydra said.

Participants will also receive financial compensation upon successful completion of the seven-visit, 12-month program.

Illinois Power in '91 to reduce size of local office work force

By Ed Gurney
Staff writer

Bob Stuber, 73, of Granite City, died at 2:16 p.m. Wednesday, March 28, 1990, at St. Elizabeth Medical Center. He had been ill for seven years and in the hospital for two months.

He was born March 12, 1917, in Lukas, Ill., and had been a lifetime resident of Granite City. In 1970 he retired from the Granite City Army Depot where he had worked as an operating engineer for 22 years. He was of the Protestant faith and a Navy veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his wife, Rose (Wilson), whom he married March 31, 1949; two sons, Roy Michael Stuber and Eric Dean Stuber, both of Granite City; one sister, Bonnie Parkinson of Centralia; four brothers, Wesley Stuber of Kenosha, Wis., Carl Stuber of Marion, Ill., Clarence and Bill Stuber, both of Kell; and one granddaughter.

Graveside services will be held at 1:15 p.m., Friday, at National Cemetery, Jefferson Barracks, Mo. Arrangements were handled by Irwin Chapel, 3939 Maryville Road.

The operating department in Maryville will not be affected.

More than $1 million in telephone line charges will be saved, Beaman said.

All offices will remain open, Beaman said.

The 260 local customer service and emergency service representatives will be reduced to 125, but 90 operators will be hired in Decatur. "So we're not really butchering the work force," Beaman said.

Employees were told of the plan earlier this year.

Bill Shreck, manager of the Collinsville office, said reductions will be based on seniority. Those who lose jobs in the local offices may be offered jobs in Decatur or other areas, Shreck said.

The cutbacks are tied to the establishment of a 24-hour phone center in Decatur to handle billing, take service orders and respond to emergencies.

The reorganization is not directly related to the refusal of the Illinois Commerce Commission to let the utility recover additional costs from the Illinois Power Company, Beaman said.

The eight positions in the Collinsville office will probably be cut to four, Shreck said. Edwardsville, Granite City, Belleville, East St. Louis and Wood River will be among those affected.

Shreck said it is uncertain whether the Collinsville office will remain at 205 W. Main. Less space will be needed since there will be fewer employees.

"We feel we can give faster and better service because the phone center will be manned 24 hours a day, seven days a week," Shreck said. Some customers are unable to call during regular business hours, he said.

The Decatur phone center will have toll-free numbers.

Customer service offices are currently open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

"The down side is that a lot of people want to call and talk to good old Martha (at a local office)," Beaman said.

"I just can't do anything about it."

The phone center will make a big difference when there are outages, he said.

A large number of operators will be available to handle calls.

A task force studied other utilities for months before the phone center plan was adopted.

"We decided the reorganization was needed whether or not we got funds from the ICC," Beaman said.

Local stations' efforts produce significant news

Given our disgust with what passes for television journalism today, we sometimes overlook the fact that there are people trying very hard to present quality work.

Betsey Bruce of KTVI-TV (Channel 2) reported a series of March 10 on-air automobile insurance stories in Missouri that showed real promise.

The stories indicated that the law mandating insurance did not solve all legal problems that can arise from traffic accidents. And the findings were a loophole that allows a driver involved in an accident to avoid revealing what insurance company carries his or her insurance.

The series also dealt with the subject of drivers assuming liability when they are not at fault because of an ignorance of the law.

What made these stories stand out was that they included information that is not already well known. That makes them different from the unending rehash of stories on prostitution, drugs and the other well-known cliches of television news.

Another bit of light came in a documentary from KETC-TV (Channel 9) March 28 called "What Makes Sally Learn?" If you missed it, you missed an interesting look at education.

Produced by Mary Leahy, the program was a good argument in favor of parental involvement in public schools.

If there is a flaw, it is that the program placed too much attention on middle-class situations where parents are strongly committed to the idea of participation.

But the lesson is clear: Parental involvement produces big dividends. It is an example of the positive programming that television critics call for so frequently.

Two weeks ago, I reported that the Fox Network, locally carried by KDNL-TV (Channel 30), was making significant inroads into prime-time ratings against the three major networks. On March 18, the station reached a milestone.

According to Nielsen ratings for that night, "The Simpsons," shown Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 30, accounted for its time slot in the St. Louis market, beating the programming of all three competing networks.

It was a first for both the Fox Network in this market and for Channel 30.

There continues to be significant differences between the ratings provided by the two major ratings services.

Nielsen, with its electronic metering devices, consistently provides higher ratings for the independent stations (Channel 30 and KETC-TV, Channel 11) than Arbitron, which relies on the less-scientific "diaries" filled out by viewers.

A physician friend tells me that he thinks the standard of television reporting on health matters is not what it should be.

Anyway, Case Western Reserve School of Medicine in Cleveland is trying to make an effect on what medical reporters report. The university is offering weeklong fellowships to medical reporters to train them in various specialized fields.

John Schiezer, medical reporter for KPLR-TV (Channel 11), spent the last week in the fellowship program. He was first from a local station to attend the course.

Ian MacBryde is an independent video producer and former television executive.

For those who are Catholics or perhaps those sensitive to religious issues, then a comedy with Eric Idle's "Nuns on the Run" (*) might send them running off in another direction.

(This movie already has gotten a pair of Chicago critics, not amenable to the movie, to award it with a "Twentieth Century Fox. The film company is now refusing them advance film screenings.)

But, take heart. This movie may flirt with bad taste but it never reaches the point to the extent that would make this cheery little romp too offensive.

Eric Idle, of Monty Python fame, and Robbie Coltrane, one of Britain's most innovative and consistently funny character actors, star as Brian and Charlie, respectively. They are a pair of cheap crooks who hatch a plan to steal millions from their thug of a boss, a vicious killer named Case, played by Robert Peterson.

After successfully pulling off the heist, a feat that involves stealing money from some Chinese gamblers, they are supposed to be turned over to Case, Brian and Charlie end up hiding in the basement of a convent to escape both the Chinese gangsters and Case's gang.

Unable to leave, they concoct a disguise, it isn't long before the boys get in the habit, so to speak, of living like nuns and pretending they are visiting the nuns' room another reader said.

It is not clear if the boy is a Monty Python fan (like me), you will enjoy "Nuns on the Run." If you are not, then they may take a miracle.

There's lots of excellent character comedy in this motion picture, although the level of humor is not as consistent as it is well-defined. Coltrane is the funnier of the lot, especially in the scene where he explains the concept of the Trinity to Idle, who must pose as a nun teaching a class on religion.

ERIC IDLE, left, and Robbie Coltrane are a pair of petty crooks who, after stealing millions from their gangster boss, escape his wrath by going underground as nun.

There is a nude scene featuring what are supposed to be nuns. Girls are shown after a intramural basketball game that lowers this film's quality considering the fact that the game takes place in a convent.

The ending is frantic and pretty funny. Several different endings are offered and the one in the film was accepted. If you are a Monty Python fan (like me), you will enjoy "Nuns on the Run." If you are not, then they may take a miracle.

Rated PG-13 (muddy). Running time: 92 minutes. Critic's rating based on four stars.

Volunteers sought for study

Impotence affects more than 10 million men in the United States, and low levels of male hormone are often the cause of the problem.

A St. Louis University School of Medicine researcher is seeking volunteers to evaluate the effectiveness of a nasal spray to raise male hormone levels and to monitor its effects on impotence.

This nasal spray is a synthetic primate gonadotropin that is naturally produced, called gonadotropin releasing hormone (GnRH), which raises male hormone levels.

Fran E. Kaiser, M.D., says the nasal spray will help stimulate the amount of testosterone, the male hormone derived from the testes.

Volunteers must be between the ages of 45 and 70. An evaluation to assess factors for impotence will be performed and a free assessment of male hormone levels will be provided. If low blood levels of male hormone are found, participants will be eligible to enroll in the study. All hospital visits and laboratory work done as part of the study are free.

For more information, contact Dr. Kaiser in the division of geriatric medicine, St. Louis University School of Medicine at (314) 577-8462.

GC's Kirgan wins two national titles

By Dave Whaley

Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — Although he assumed a bigger load than he originally wanted, Allen Kirgan simply added to his medal collection.

Kirgan, 28, of Granite City, won two gold medals and a third-place medal at the national collegiate judo meet this weekend at the University of California campus in Berkeley, Calif. Kirgan won national championships in the +209 weight class for two-year schools and also won the open division. He took third place in the +209 class in the four-year scholastic division.

"I only lost one match the two weeks I had. I didn't feel I fought that well the whole tournament," said Kirgan, a freshman at the Granite City Campus of Belleville Area College. "I pulled out a couple of those matches in the end."

His one loss possibly prevented him from winning championships in all three divisions. Kirgan lost in the four-year semifinals to San Jose State's Tom Whelan, who went on to win the championship while Kirgan settled for third.

Getting all wet

Does the spring sports season start too soon? Only when winter ends too late.

When high school athletic directors anywhere north of Pensacola, Fla., make up their spring sports schedules, they can pretty well assume that their early-season events will be lost to the weather. There are exceptions, but generally warm and dry weather in late March and early April leads to cool and rainy temperatures later in the spring.

This is why several sports editors in our area hate the spring sports season. It's tough to plan a sport's season when you can only guess who's going to be able to play on a certain date. Just line up a bundle of alternative copy and photos and hope for the best.

Or worse, you can always write a column about these problems — something I'm doing right now.

I'm sure the Warrior baseball and soccer seasons will begin sometime before Mother's Day — maybe even tomorrow, although the warmer weather is supposed to be accompanied by more precipitation. That would make the more conventional kind want what we received last Friday night.

The baseball team has scheduled a double-header for 4 p.m. Friday against Wood River at the field. That's a makeup of Wednesday's single game which was cancelled Monday due to wet grounds. So Bob Stegeman and Co. are already trying to make up the lost time with three extra innings. They will make up last Saturday's snowed-out double-header with Washington if at all possible during the Easter holiday break in mid-April.

The Lady Warrior soccer team will open its season in a tough tournament Friday at Moline (Mo.) High School, Granite City and Oakville at 7:45 p.m. Saturday. Aquinas Mercy is also in the tournament, playing Moline at 6 p.m. Friday and Oakville at 6:15 p.m. Saturday. The weather is the wild card. Season opener with Cluer has been rescheduled for April 30, so we should be all caught up now. Now if it doesn't rain for the next two months everything will be fine. Right.

Just think about all the cold weather the major leagues will be missing next week. While the stay in St. Louis and Atlanta will be longer, several northern cities will not doubt be freezing on dates when regular season games were scheduled.

Which brings up a pet peeve of mine and that of Writers' Herd's. Why in the world are the major league schedules drawn up with so many open dates in April? So many games are rescheduled in the first month that dates are going to be created by Mother Nature.

As it is, it's not unheard of for

"I had beaten Sirban three times before," said Kirgan. "And the guy he beat in the championship had been the top seed going in. So (Sirban) must have had a super tournament."

Kirgan was born and raised in Granite City and graduated from North High School in 1979. He runs the Granite City Judo Club at the YMCA. He picked up on

—Allen Kirgan

Less than a month later, Kirgan entered the National Judo Tournament and placed third in the heavyweight division. He's been moving up the ladder ever since.

"Any wrestler should be able to pick up judo very quickly. A lot of the throws and pins are very similar. There should be more from Granite City doing it. It would help put Granite City wrestling back to where it was with the great wrestlers in the past like the Whelans and the Perkinses were involved in judo."

Kirgan said he had almost totally retired from active competition outside of the area when he decided to enter the national tournament.

"They said I would probably go in as a top seed because of my record in the military," he said.

Kirgan gave credit to those who helped him train, including John Shepard of Washington Park, who won the national high school championship two weeks ago.

"If you don't have anyone to train with you it's impossible to get ready," he said. "There were a few guys willing to take a beating to help me out. So now we've got high school and college national champions from this area."

Kirgan thought he could have won all three national titles, although he had no intention of entering the open division.

"Mike Urioste went out as my coach, although he went out more as a friend," said Kirgan. "He went to the meeting and said he was the top seed (in the scholastic division), so he entered me in the open."

"That's tough because I was going against guys in the lighter weight classes. I was the only one in my weight because of their sickness. Plus I was often finishing a match (which lasts about five minutes) and going right into another one in the next match. It got me an extra medal, but I needed a few ice packs, too."

Kirgan is in school with the goal of becoming a wrestling coach, and he helps with the Granite City Wrestling Club. He's planning on competing in the Prairie State Games this summer and going back to defend his national titles next year.

He especially wants to thank

Puhse's pitching key for Lady Warriors

By Brian Henry

GRANITE CITY — On a team which features seniors starting at seven positions, the barometer of success will be a sophomore.

That's the assessment of John Hutchings, the new head coach of the Lady Warrior softball team (13-13 last year). Sophomore Mia Puhse continues to be the face of the pitching staff. She will try to overcome control problems that plagued her as well as the remainder of the staff last year.

"Pitching is very important to us this year," said Hutchings, the former Lady Warrior replacement coach who replaced Jim Davis after assistant Davis' or several years ago. If (Puhse) continues, we may have some problems and we'll be forced to move Kim Pawlak."

Hutchings stressed that he

Grand Hunt is Saturday at Horseshoe Lake Park

Through the United Kennel Club Inc. and the Hunting Retriever Club Inc., every individual who enjoys participating in hunting has the opportunity to hunt all year.

The hunt will begin at 7 a.m. Friday through Sunday and continue throughout each day.

For more information, the UKC Hunting Retriever Club Inc. is providing a program to fulfill its intended purpose in life — hunting. These two organizations provide actual hunting tests in a controlled environment, for which anyone is able to train and test a dog all year round. This keeps him in top shape for the actual hunting season.

The Hunting Retriever Club Inc. provides ongoing educational and training experience for the hunter and his retriever. A hunting retriever will be able to compete in all the tests set up in the stake he was entered in without being eliminated. The HRC believes in promoting conservation of waterfowl and upland game, and provides a continuing commitment to our Second Amendment right, the right to keep and bear arms.

Bain still calls 'em as he sees 'em

Granite City has earned a position in all sports through the years. Football, basketball, baseball, tennis, swimming, diving, you name it. We've had outstanding men and women in all fields.

On the national scene, we have a representative in the highly-visible sport of basketball. He's Jim Bain. If there's an important college game on TV, Bain is likely to be one of the three callers.

Bain, now a Decatur resident, was inducted into the Granite City Sports Hall of Fame as a charter member in 1987. He has done many important games recently and Bain is still very mobile official is always in complete control on the court.

I don't mean he completely takes over. The other officials have their part in calling the game, but Jim is the one fan or the coaches look to when an especially tough call is called for.

In the many years I have followed his hardwood callings, I can't remember a single instance that he's missed the right call.

Before I forget, there's another official from this immediate area who's made a name for himself. Alton's Ed Hightower has worked Big 10 and Big 8 games, as well as the Final Four and the Tournament.

Now, grade school principal in Alton, but I first met him during my stint as sports information director at SUE.

After the decision to hire Ed Hunke was made, I found out Baker would have at least considered the move.

It all worked out for the best for Warrior fans.

I have learned that I'm No. 1 on the list for induction into the Greater St. Louis Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame for 1991. This year's class of inductees will be honored Saturday at the Marriott Airport Hotel. My wife, Jo, and I will be present. Madison Mayor John "Yogi" Pulchetti will be inducted into the Illinois Softball Hall of Fame as well.

The third annual Granite City Sports Hall of Fame golf tournament is scheduled for the day of the induction dinner, May 18, at the Arlington Golf Course.

We're still seeking golfers to participate. Anyone interested should call Les (Tombstone) Thompson, the meet chairman and a member of the Hall's board of directors, at 876-7636.

In the same area, I regret tremendously that I played only a small role in the decision of the game that Jim is the one fan or the coaches look to when an especially tough call is called for.

Sports shortsEx-Warrior Czar playing for Berry

Johnna Kaye Czar, from Granite City, was a member of the Berry (Ga.) College women's soccer team which was honored recently after posting an phenomenal record in its first four years of existence, including an NAIA runner-up finish this season.

Czar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Czar, graduated from Granite City High School in 1989.

The Lady Fury program was started in 1986 and during each of the next four seasons the team advanced to the final four of the NAIA playoffs. Berry won the 1987 national championship and was runner-up in 1988 and 1989.

Ray Leone coached the Lady Fury during its first three seasons before giving way to current coach Rebecca Burleigh, and went to a 19-32 last fall. The Lady Fury's four-year record is 71-14.

Berry College is an independent, co-educational institution located in Rome, Ga. The school emphasizes a comprehensive educational program committed to high academic standards and religious values.

Bob Holmes, "The One-Man Volleyball Team," will visit Granite City for a series of games on April 1.

Holmes, a full-time teacher and counselor at Freedman Village High School, is challenging the area's top six-player teams at all levels: high school, college, senior, senior, male, female and mixed). He plans to play as many as 10 games at a choice of five different sites over the weekend.

Holmes will be at Lindbergh, Hazelwood East and Parkway Central high schools on March 30. He will be at Granite City High School (Memorial Gymnasium) at 1:30 p.m. April 1 before an appearance that night at For-

The HRC is a nationwide organization devoted to bringing out the finest in natural hunting instincts in the retriever breeds and is only interested in testing the retriever in true-to-life hunting situations. During actual testing all bird throwers in the field are blindfolded and the dog learns to depend greatly on his memory when a test consists of multiple marks.

Whatever situation could appear during actual hunting

events must turn to a License

Hunting Retriever Hunt. The importance of gun safety is stressed at each and every one of these hunts. The proper clothing is also an important factor.

Camouflage must be worn by the handler and everyone involved with the tests.

The Hunting Retriever club is the only Retriever Club that has the backing of the United Kennel Club. The club has the largest hunting dog registry in the world and sponsors more hunting dog events than any other organization.

This is an educational program where the hunter gets a more intense true-to-life training and testing program, where hunters help hunters.

Retrievers Unlimited was approached by the HRC in 1989

and asked to host the Spring

Grand Hunt.

The Grand Hunt is the ultimate hunt of all hunts. This event is open to only those dogs that have acquired their HR

Championship titles. The Grand must be more versatile animals because they come from all areas of the United States and must be capable of performing anywhere.

This is not an easy task for the dog nor the handler because all the United States are different from the different shapes and types of soils to the different scents that are actually in the area from the different wildlife itself.

The first Grand Hunt ever to be held was hosted by the Southeastern Illinois Hunting Retriever Club. They had a total entry of about 18 dogs. Since this time, with the numbers of dogs that have earned their HR Championship title, the number of dogs that have earned their HR Championship title, the number of dogs that have earned their HR Championship title has grown to the point of a 60-dog entry in the fall 1989 Grand in Demopolis, Ala.

Spectators are welcome. There is no admission charge and there will be food and refreshments available on the grounds.

kamp and junior Amy Bohnenstiel will also more than likely score Puhse and Pawlak.

"We are more balanced than we have ever been before," said Hutchings. "We have quite a few versatile players who can play more than one position. Definitely, we're all right. If we can hit the right pitch face, we should be competitive."

"The Lady Warriors will need all the offense they can muster to compete in the strong SWC. Peoria's nemeses, Belleville East and West, remain the elite of the conference. The Lady Lancers are the defending state champions and have won their last 31 games. Collinsville should also be formidable with one of the area's better pitchers, Angie Gebhard."

"We should be in the middle of the conference," said Hutchings. "The Belleville teams are always tough for us and Collinsville has a great pitcher in Gebhard, who has started for them the last three seasons.

"I think we can handle Alton and East St. Louis, and maybe if we catch a break we could get a win against either Belleville team."

This would appear to be the year for the Lady Warriors to make a move as they are armed with a solid and experienced group of seniors. If the pitching comes together, Granite City has a chance to finally make some noise in the post-season.

"We have nearly 'everyone back from last year and if we're going to make any noise,' it will have to be this year," said Hutchings.

Hutchings figures to be facing a rebuilding year next season, and it's up to him to avoid coming off a successful season rather than a sub-par one. If the team meshes together as Hutchings hopes, it could be the former.

Child care staff turnover at 'alarming rate'

URBANA — Child care teachers and assistants in Illinois are turning to other professions at alarming rates, according to a study conducted by the Illinois Association for the Education of Young Children.

They are leaving behind jobs that pay near the poverty level, jobs that offer few benefits, jobs that society has assigned little prestige — and the children they were trained to teach, the study concluded.

The study, made last winter, showed the turnover rate in full-day centers was 39 percent for teachers and 40 percent for assistants in 1989. A decade ago, the national turnover rate was 15 percent.

Nearly 50 percent of the teachers who left cited poor pay as their reason for leaving.

These findings are similar to those of a recent child care staffing study conducted in five cities across the nation, according to Rosemarie Vardell, director of research for the Illinois Early Childhood Education Laboratory at the University of Illinois and chair of the committee on quality, compensation and affordability for the Illinois Association for the Education of Young Children.

Workers have become increasingly concerned about the people who are staffing child care programs, because we've known on an instinctive level that poor pay leads to high turnover and difficult finding qualified people," Vardell said. "Unfortunately, what we've suspected was almost exactly what we found with the survey.

The average child care teacher makes an average of $10,000 per year and an assistant makes about $6,500 per year, with practically no benefits. And, the lower the wages at a particular center, the greater the turnover. It is understandable difficult for a person to be committed to a field where they can't earn a decent living."

The survey represents 191 child care centers in Illinois and roughly 10 percent. These included privately-owned centers, non-profit centers and government-subsidized centers.

Nearly 3,000 teachers, assistants, teacher-directors and directors in the state responded to questions about salaries, benefits and working conditions.

The survey showed that average salaries ranged from $4,79 to $10,000 per year for centers and between $3,80 and $4,41 per hour for assistant teachers, despite the fact that almost 50 percent of the people teaching in child care programs have associate or bachelors degrees.

Teacher-directors and directors made somewhat better, making average salaries between $6,23 and $8,96 per hour.

Also, average rate of pay in for-profit centers was lower than salaries in non-profit and partially subsidized non-profit centers. This finding was consistent with the national study, which showed that for-profit centers spent 40 percent of the budget on salaries, while non-profit or subsidized centers spent 60 percent of the budget on salaries.

Vardell said government subsidized centers are not "extra" money for centers.

"The subsidies are reimbursements for children whose parents cannot afford child care," she said. The reimbursements do not exceed the standard rates charged at the centers.

Benefits and working conditions varied around the state. Centers that offered the highest salaries generally offered the best benefits. However, more than half of the child care providers had no paid health coverage.

Children will be the losers if the trend continues, Vardell said.

"We know that those first five or six years of a child's life are some of the most important years, and yet it is becoming obvious that we are not doing the best job for them."

Income higher than in nation

The average St. Louis area resident's income was higher than the average American's during the 1980s, according to an analysis by the Regional Commerce & Growth Association.

In 1980, per-capita income in the St. Louis area was 4.3 percent higher than the U.S. average. By 1987, the last year for which figures are available, that local advantage had risen to 7.9 percent — $16,706 for the St. Louis area and $15,484 for the rest of the country, RCGA's research division reports.

The bad news: Average employment growth here was 1.53 percent annually, lagging behind the nation's average annual employment growth of 1.67 percent during the 1980s.

Best Buy reduces sales staff

Best Buy Co. Inc., an electronics and appliance retail chain, cut the compensated sales staff at its seven St. Louis-area stores by about 16 percent March 5, company officials said.

They said the move was part of a plan to remodel the stores and change the way they offer merchandise.

The remodeling is expected to be finished by June, when the stores will employ only salaried salespeople and feature more detailed product information, a company spokesman said.

"We regret having to lay off anyone; however, the new program makes it impossible to retain the commissioned sales concept," said Richard M. Schulze, president and chief executive officer of the Minneapolis-based firm.

"Experience and data provided from St. Louis-area research efforts show that consumers prefer salaried sales personnel and the approach we are introducing."

Company officials said 44 full- and part-time employees were discharged.

"Each affected employee will receive a good severance package consisting of one week's pay for every year of employment plus career counseling and outplacement services provided by the highly respected firm of Drake Beam Morin," he said.

Severance pay policies vary

Four out of 10 (41.6 percent) Illinois firms will give severance pay for involuntary termination of office staff, according to The Management Association's Personnel Practices Survey.

One-third (34.6 percent) will pay severance because of an eliminated office, 24.1 percent for closing the facility; 22.7 percent for an indefinite layoff; and 11.3 percent will give severance pay for the sale of the facility.

Nearly two-thirds (64 percent) of the firms base their severance payments on the length of service. Two-thirds (67.2 percent) will pay severance of six weeks or longer.

The Personnel Practices Survey represents responses from nearly 400 Illinois firms. This survey indicates trends in personnel policies and benefits.

Results are divided into six major categories: Pay Practices; Working Conditions; Health and Welfare Benefits; Recruitment, Training and Development; Employee/Community Relations; and Labor Relations.

to keep costs down because they have a smaller, local customer base and are less likely to attract problem borrowers, Tanking said.

Landmark charges 13.9 percent. Large national banks charge 18 to 20 percent.

Large big banks mass market credit cards on a national basis and absorb tremendous losses from people who get in too deep, said Edie Holstein, director of Bankcard Holders of America.

"The most aggressive marketers have the biggest losses — up to five times higher than those who market only locally," he said.

Coffee breaks: you've got time

A little more than half (52.1 percent) of Illinois firms provide two 10- to 15-minute coffee breaks per day for their office staff, according to the Management Association's Personnel Practices Survey.

Nearly half (46.1 percent) of the firms provide coffee at no charge to the employee. One third (35.5 percent) require the employee to pay for coffee.

Popeye's receives company award

Popeye's Famous Fried Chicken and Biscuits, located at 2908 Madison Ave., has been awarded the company's "Silver Plate Award" for outstanding operations in the company's Region 3.

The award goes to the restaurant with the highest standard of product quality, fast and friendly service and restaurant cleanliness in the 117-store region.

The award was presented to Franchisee Don Bridick and director of operations Brad Eavenson at the recent 14th annual Franchise Conference in Las Vegas.

The restaurant is operated by General Manager Bill Harrison and Assistant Manager Diane West.

The menu features Cajun-style fried chicken as well as mild-recipe chicken, fresh home-made buttermilk biscuits, an assortment of unique side dishes, as well as various seafood specialties.

Bridick and Eavenson said total credit for the success of the restaurant goes to the manager and crew people for "their dedication and effort to exceed the typical fast-food restaurant image."

Beat burglars at finding holes in home security

Every 10 seconds, a home in this country is burglarized. Yet many burglaries can be prevented if homeowners take some time to think like a burglar and survey their homes for points of easy access.

Maybe there is a garage door that you rarely lock or an upstairs window that is usually left open. And how about those newswires that accumulated on your doorstep while you were gone last weekend? They were a sure sign that you weren't home.

The best way to prevent a burglary is to make it difficult for a burglar to get in, says Jerry Alexander, an engineering consultant at Aetna Life & Casualty.

"Most home burglars are interested in getting quick access and making a quick getaway, so if it's difficult for them to get in or they have a limited amount of time because your alarm system has notified the police, they'll go elsewhere," Alexander says.

Security precautions can range from simple and inexpensive measures such as putting bars across basement windows and stopping doors while you are away, to the installation of security systems that alert police or a central office that a burglary has occurred.

And several burglary-prevention measures even can put money back in your pocket. Many insurance companies will give you a credit on your homeowners' policy if you have taken certain precautions. For example, deadbolts on all exterior doors may be worth 2 percent, and motion detectors another 2 percent. Installing a burglar alarm that is hooked up to a your zeal to protect your home from burglars, don't fall prey to phony security companies that have no interest in protecting your home from a robbing burglar.

Although the problem is not widespread, such cases have occurred. Generally, the victims were contacted by telephone and offered a security system for a relatively low price. After the sale, someone from the "company" came to their homes to "design" the system. Actually, their homes were being cased.

Here are some key steps to include in your home security audit:

- Make your home look lived in. Bright automatic light dimmers. While you are away in winter, have your driveway cleared of snow and in summer have your grass mowed.
- Lock up. This means your garage as well as your house. A ladder and tools stored in the garage could be used by a burglar to gain access to your home.

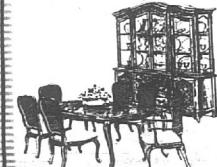

Don't forget the basement. Basement windows and doors also provide access. Put bars on the windows and a padlock on the hatch.

Reinforce the locks on windows and doors. A simple nail in a hole that connects the upper and lower sashes of your window works better than the thumbturn locks that are easily forced on most windows.

Homeowners who are interested in learning more about how to protect their homes can get a copy of the booklet "Bless This House: A Home Security Audit," at no cost, by writing Aetna Life & Casualty, P.O. Box 104, Hartford, Conn. 06101-5269.

Look for hardy types of azaleas

Sometimes, azaleas planted in spring live through the summer but do not survive the winter.

For the gardener who has looked forward to getting years of pleasure from the plant, this is a very disappointing. If the cause of the problem is unknown, it's also frustrating.

In some cases, the problem is due to the type of azalea selected. Potted azaleas sold for indoor use seldom will survive our harsh winters because they are not bred for hardiness and come from stock grown in the South. Some varieties sold at outdoor nurseries and garden centers, in terms of branching and much depends on the care and protection given during the growing season.

But there are plenty of hardy types. You might ask a plant expert for a recommendation. A neighbor who has successfully tended azaleas you admire. If you have any doubts about whether a type at a garden center or nursery is hardy, ask who grew it. Most will be happy to provide that type of information. Avoid types grown in the Southern areas of the United States.

Evergreen azaleas are available. Flowers come in a range of colors, from white to deep red and purple. Some types of azaleas prefer full sun while others do better in semi-shade. Heights range from 12 inches to 8 feet. Widths also vary widely.

To encourage good growth for

Robert
Dingwall

include, among many others: Delaware Valley (white flowers); Stewart Stand (red); Bud (pink); and Carol (lavender).

Azaleas need a soil that is well-drained and high in organic matter. They like a pH (soil acidity) level of about 5.5.

To create the best growing conditions, just before planting add 4 to 6 inches of organic matter, such as sphagnum peat moss or compost, and work it in well. A light application of sulfur will help to promote good root development.

To lower the pH, it is necessary to add ground sulfur, available from any garden center, at planting time. Sulfur should be applied each spring about April 1 as the pH tends to increase during the summer with watering. How much should be added depends on the size of the azalea. Also, if the summer is dry and you have to water excessively, you probably will need to reapply sulfur in September. St. Louis County water, as well as water of other areas, will raise the pH level faster than rainwater.

Hardy evergreen azaleas

just after flowering. Azaleas have fine roots that are produced near the surface so do not cultivate around the base of the plants.

It is important to see that plants receive adequate watering during dry periods—especially in September since plants should not be allowed to go to the winter without plenty of moisture in the soil.

To reduce moisture loss from soil, mulch around azaleas at planting time and then at least once a year. Many azaleas were not well watered this past fall and were severely damaged. Leaves dried up, and, in some cases, the plants were lost.

When planted under trees, they need more water since trees absorb great amounts of moisture. Azaleas could suffer if allowed to go dry for any period of time.

All azaleas will need some pruning to control plant shape and size. This is best done just after flowering.

If damage has occurred due to severe winter conditions, prune in early spring when new growth appears by cutting out all dead wood.

Avoid pruning after mid-June as this interferes with bud development.

New publication packed with herb-growing hints

By Robert Dingwall

"How to Grow Herbs in the Midwest" is a new, 32-page booklet published by the St. Louis Herb Society, an areawide organization.

The booklet is packed with information that can help beginners as well as more experienced herb gardeners who want to expand their knowledge about the types of herbs available and who want details on specific herbs.

Herbs have a wide variety of uses. Some are used for cooking and some for potpourri. Lavender, which flowers profusely all summer, is among those that are grown for their beauty in the garden. It is a common edging plant.

The book covers the selection of the site and the requirements for growing herbs successfully in the garden or in individual containers. The care, propagation and harvesting of herbs are well-covered and there are detailed notes on each specific plant.

This comprehensive book, which is illustrated with black-and-white photographs, can serve as a quick source of information. The suggested retail price is $3.50 per copy. It is available from the society's members, through the Missouri Botanical Garden Gift Shop, and through some book outlets in the area.

Old Orchard Gardens Nursery, 333 Meramec Station Road, Manchester, Mo., has announced that it will be a seller of garden centers in the country, selling to sell the new Natural Guard products. This complete family of gardening products include insect controls, disease controls, plant foods, soil amendments and gardening aids, all derived from natural products.

Antiques still trendy move

As Americans move into a new decade, it's apparent that they are not leaving behind their passion for antiques. In fact, interest in them is more appropriate than ever, with today's emphasis on family and the comforts of home.

For an antiques lover, finding a treasure at a bargain price in an unexpected place is quite a thrill. And once the object has been lovingly restored to its former glory, there's the pleasure of imagining the person who created it with skill and care, as well as its former owners and how it's used.

The recently published book

Antiques at Home (Clarkson N. Potter Inc.) by Barbara Milo Ohrbach may be of interest to experienced collectors and amateur enthusiasts alike. Ohrbach, whose Manhattan boutique, Cherchez, features antique textiles and decorative accessories for the home, has assembled in her book a stunning collection of full-color photographs from the world of collecting.

A browser's delight, "Antiques at Home" also offers a wealth of practical advice. Chapters cover ceramics, wood, glass, paper, silver and textiles, with tips on terminology to help you find the best quality items. Each chapter also includes a list of tips for handling, cleaning and storing the objects once they have been acquired.

The last chapter of the book features a list of antiques shops, auctions and fairs throughout the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Europe, as well as directories of museums, galleries and historic houses.

It doesn't take a lot of money or expertise to acquire a collection of antiques that will add beauty and character to a home. While the quality and condition of an object are important, it's most important to buy things that you love and want to have around you.

As Ohrbach writes, antiques

"lend grace to our homes and lift our spirits. The joy of living with beautiful objects is accessible to all of us."

Look Who's Wearing Red Wings!

It's been said that you can judge a man by the boots he wears. Red Wing prefers to judge a pair of boots by the man who wears them. Either way, there are a lot of famous people who have been known to pull on a pair of Red Wings.

SALE ENDS 4/17/90

The big screen is also no stranger to U.S. made Irish Setter boots. In the movie classic, "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," Jack Nicholson wore a pair, as well as Kurt Russell in the more recent release, "Overboard." In his day, though, John Wayne preferred Pecos Pull-ons.
